Is CISSP Right for Me?

As organizations continue to pursue digital transformation initiatives, the threat landscape is always expanding. Yet cybersecurity leadership talent is scarce. That's where CISSP from ISC2 comes in — to help fill the gap. Once certified, the opportunities for certified professionals are near limitless.

CISSP, a vendor-neutral cybersecurity credential, shows you have the knowledge to design, implement and manage a best-in-class cybersecurity program in any environment. Vendor-neutral credentials are sought by organizations to avoid the limitations and expense of vendor lock-in.

CISSP is particularly well-suited for information security professionals seeking to prove their understanding of cybersecurity strategy and hands-on implementation. It shows you have the advanced knowledge and technical skills to design, develop and manage an organization's overall security posture.

CISSPs in the Community

"CISSP is recognized worldwide as the gold standard. The whole premise of it is not just passing the exam but demonstrating you have the verifiable experience to perform at a high level. The ISC2 Code of Ethics is important. The ongoing CPE requirement is tough, but it helps make sure your skills stay up to date. It all adds up to a very credible certification."

Angus Macrae

Head of Cybersecurity
King's Service Centre, Cornwall, England

"CISSP gives you a lot of street credibility with the people who do this for a living because they all understand what it is. It's definitely an important designation to have on your calling card. I see it as the gold standard in cybersecurity. It's the most-recognized credential in the security community."

Theresa Grafenstine

Global Chief Auditor, Technology
Citi, Wilmington, DE, USA

"When I passed the CISSP exam, I gained access to the strong network of industry professionals at ISC2. I attend industry events to learn more about how my peers are dealing with cybersecurity challenges. The ISC2 Community online discussion board and local chapters have engaging presentations and workshops where you can focus on your skills."

Jason Lau

CISO
Crypto.com, Singapore

"The CISSP made me a stronger professional. It taught me that everything I was learning while working at one company was not going to work everywhere. Now I know what the standard is and how to identify the best framework. When I'm put in different and unfamiliar positions, I have a solid foundation from the CISSP that I can work from."
